From a parent of a child without a disability in Beverly, MA:

"While coming home from camp, my son asked if I knew that everyone's brain was different. He explained that some kids at camp are different from other kids because they have certain "disabilities." When asked what he thought about that, he said, "It's all good,... Mom. We're all special & unique in our own way."

... a pretty profound statement for a 7-year old!

Your vote makes more profound statements like this possible!
